

GENDER QUEST IN EMPLOYABILITY SKILLS OF COMMERCE UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS IN KERALA

Name of the student: Sukhila K

Name of the supervising teacher: Dr.M Jesa

Year of the study: 2015

OBJECTIVE

- To find out employability skills among commerce undergraduate students in Kerala.
- To find out whether there exist any significant difference on employability skills among commerce undergraduate students with respect to gender.

METHODOLOGY

Method used: Survey method

Sample: 420 undergraduate commerce students

Tool: Test of Employability Skills

Statistical technique used Test of significance difference between two independent mean

RESULT

There is significant difference in employability skills among the total students with respect to gender. There is significant gender difference in the component of employability skills: problem solving skills. There is no significant gender difference in the components of employability skills: management skills, initiative, teamwork, time management, and planning and organizing.

KEY TERMS: Employability skills